We help people live their lives to the full

Notting Hill's Home Support service helps people to live independently and with dignity. We currently have a wide range of job opportunities, which involve working with a variety of people.

You can choose to work in specific areas of support, where you might visit people in their own homes, or as a care worker in our accommodation-based care services. We also have office-based opportunities for administration staff.

Our customers and accommodation based care services are based in Islington, Barnet, Hammersmith and Fulham, and Westminster.

Open Days to find out more

The Open Days will involve some initial tests and an interview. If you are interested in working for Home Support and if we think that you might be suitable for a role, we will invite you back for an interview, and a group exercise. This will require you to attend either a full morning or afternoon.

Working for Notting Hill Housing

We offer a competitive salary, generous annual leave, contributions to a stakeholder pension, health cover and an interest-free loan for your season ticket.

We believe in our staff and their abilities, not just to do their jobs but to learn new skills, to face new challenges and to develop a career with us. If you get a job with us, you can:

Learn new skills

Working as part of a dedicated team you will learn how to provide a professional service in care or support. You will also receive training required for the role.

Get qualified

We have development and training opportunities to support and empower our staff. Our aim is to provide the right training at the right time so that all of our members of staff fulfil their potential.

Some of our training opportunities can lead to recognised qualifications such as National Vocational Qualifications (NVQs) to develop your knowledge and your career prospects. If you are in an administrative post, you will benefit from a range of training courses and may have the chance to complete a relevant NVQ.
